

ABSTRACT

A method for controlling access to secured information for a predetermined region of a computer generated original image presented on a display, comprising: determining whether a user is 5 authorized to access the secured information; and, in response to the determining, distorting the original image to produce a distorted region for the predetermined region to provide the user with the secured information on the display.